Jesus

Dearest apostle, be assured of my good will toward you. At times, I see you forget that you have a beloved and constant friend. I am a friend who never finds you tiresome or difficult. I am with you during your calm periods and during your storms. I find you a precious companion, regardless of your disposition in any moment. Think of someone whose companionship you crave or whose companionship you craved in the past. Just the thought of spending time with that person could bring you consolation. With that person, you felt comfortable and safe, and there was joy. You could be yourself and felt that you fit well with this other. Dear apostle, for you, I am that other. For me, you are that other. We fit together. When you are with me, you are with the one who completely understands you and completely loves you. My love for you is sympathetic, understanding, and unchangeable. My love for you will weather any strain or pain, any mistake or any emotional storm you experience. I will never leave you. I will always love you and welcome you in my heart. Your answers and your clarity will be found with me. Sometimes, dear apostle, you fear I am not giving you the answers you require. This is not true. If you need an answer from me, you will receive it. If a course correction is necessary, I will direct you to it. Your prayers are instantly at home in my heart and I rejoice that you have come to me with these requests. It is not possible that a beloved apostle will be rejected. Do not think that I ignore your pain or that your pain leaves me indifferent. You, dear apostle, have shown me that you are interested in my pain, which will always involve the pain of humanity. This moves my heart to the greatest generosity. I answer your prayers in a mystical way. Some day you will see that I answered your prayers in the most beneficial way possible, given the intention. Many unnecessary calamities are avoided because of prayer. The greatest mercy flows down to your loved ones through your prayers, even though you suffer terribly when you see your loved ones hurt or when you must be separated from them, particularly when you do not expect to be separated from them. I am the merciful Christ in all of these situations. Understanding will come, dear friend. Believe in your prayers. Believe in my merciful presence with you. Believe in the impact of your service and believe in the gratitude I have for you, even when you do not feel it.
